Tokyo Tower

Tokyo Tower, at a height of 313 meters, is the world's tallest self-supporting iron structure, edging out the Eiffel Tower by 13 meters. Its uppermost observation deck offers a spectacular view of Ginza, Tokyo Bay, Yokohama, and Mt. Fuji. It was completed in 1958 as a broadcast tower.

Sumida River Cruise

A popular and effective way to see Tokyo is to take a cruise down the Sumida River, as such a cruise will show not only the modern skyline of the city but also provide glimpses of the Tokyo of yesteryear.

Sensoji Temple in Asakusa

Sensoji is the oldest and most impressive temple in Tokyo. The main hall was first built in 645 to house a tiny golden statue of Kannon, the goddess of mercy, that had been repeatedly hauled up in fishing nets despite being thrown back into the river. The temple precincts bustle with people praying, buying fortunes, shopping or sightseeing.
